Trapper Creek

A wonderful time was had by all. We were blessed by hot sunny weather. The pavilion was in the center of a very nice shady camp ground and it had a large barbecue in the middle. Across the street was a large grassy area with lots of afternoon shade for our games. The historical society cooked up one of the best steaks I've had in a while and provided baked potatoes, salad, fruit, and desserts to go along with it. Everyone was very impressed and was talking about returning in two years. Then at about 10 p.m.. the music started. At first it sounded like someone's stereo being played very loud. For those of us in tents, by 3 a.m. it sounded like the singer was standing next to my bed and yelling in my ear. Several members left during the night. I had a talk with one of the Trapper Creek Historical Club members and she was going to let it be known that, IF we consider returning, there can be not loud, late night music.

July Meeting

The July Meeting will be held at the Square Dance Pavilion at Alaskaland. The usual times will prevail: 6:30 p.m. social, 7 p.m. dinner, and 7:30 p.m. meeting. There will be someone at the Moore Gate to let you into the park. People with the last initial A - M bring salad, hot dishes, beans, etc. and N - Z bring desserts.

We will be discussing the Golden Days events: the parade, Pedro Monument dedication, etc.

Filler

Being as no one has passed on anything to print in our newsletter, I will fill the blank space as best as I can.

Randy Paddock volunteered, at the May meeting, to lead the Wednesday night Terrorise-the-Tourist. By the end of the May, he had bought Grizzly's, at Alaskaland, and now will not have Wednesdays free to lead the group. Some one new will need to volunteer.

I, Georgia Berry the Secretary, will not be at the July meeting. I will be driving June Sidars down to Anchorage to pick up her granddaughter. Hopefully, I will have found someone to take a few quick notes on the events for me.
