

JOINT MEET WITH ANCHORAGE AUTO MUSHERS IN DELTA

by Bill and Joyce Chace

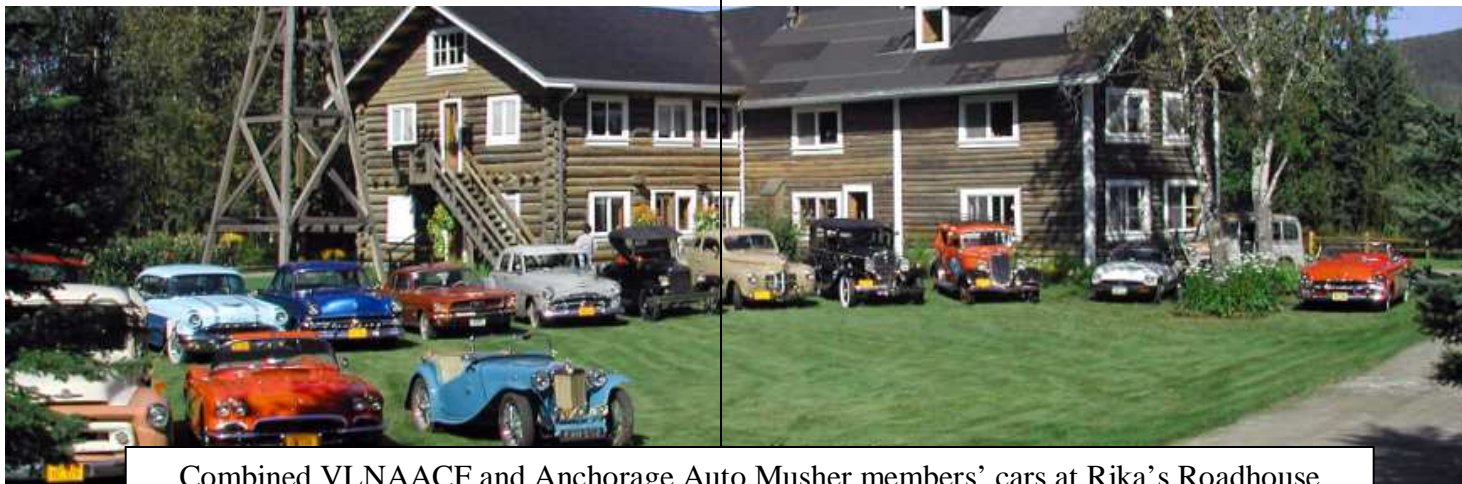

Some members trailered vehicles, some drove, but most important, fun was had by all. There were a total of 38 members and guests in attendance at the joint meet in Delta August 17-19 with 19 cars. We had a great turnout from Fairbanks including Squeaky & Marion Benham, Bill & Joyce Chace, Dennis Dussman, Garry & James Farnham & Melanie, Ron Fry, Scott & Linda Grundy, Rick & Jill Larrick, Bub & Rochelle Larson, Roby McHone, Ed & Laurel McLaughlin, Julio & Marilyn Merced, Gary & Jill Nash, Don & Angie Oines, and Gene Wescott & Caroline. Joining us from Anchorage were Dennis & Diane Allen, Jim Fredenhagen, Howard & Barb Hansen, Art & Tamea Isham, Ted & Colleen Kimzey, Kurt Rein, and Lee & Betty Westcott-Plummer.

Gary Nash and Squeaky Benham prepared tasty dogs and hamburgers for the picnic Friday evening and Saturday afternoon at the community center. We had beautiful sunny weather, mosquito free, and windless, with good conversation, good food, and relaxation in the shade of the trees. Even the Alaska Range shined.

The morning tour was packed with interest and great photo shots. It began at 9:00 AM at the community center and combined the tour of roadhouses with draws for the best poker hand. The first stop was an invitation to a private homestead museum by Larry Dorshorst. His collection of antique memorabilia could have entertained some for a whole day. Unfortunately Larry was out fighting fires in the lower 48 and missed the stream of wonderful cars visiting his homestead. We motored to the second stop at the Sullivan Roadhouse which has been wonderfully restored and relocated from the Valdez Trail Route to the junction of the Richardson Hwy and the Alcan. Today's travelers can revisit the history of early transportation in Alaska. Our last stop at Rika's Roadhouse called for a great photo shot of the group.

After Saturday's 1:00 PM barbecue, the faire was, "Let the games begin!" Actually it was more like, "Oh yeah, we can't take a nap now, we still have games to play." It was just as much fun administering the games as playing them. Comments made by people guessing what tools or car parts were hidden in a bag included: "This is a thing that...well its a suctiony thing on a stick, or this is the thing a ma jiggy that tightens the what sha ma call it." Recalling proper names for items was a difficult task. The ball bearing was called a marble by several people. (That's probably where the name "steely" came from)

Best sportsmanship and biggest loser, placing last in two games was Rick Larrick for an award of duck tape & bailing wire.

Everyone pitched in to help clean up which was absolutely wonderful. Garry's assistance in the kitchen was really appreciated. We hope everyone will try to make next years meet with the Anchorage group. It will be hosted by the Antique Auto Musers and will most likely be sometime in August. There's a rumor, unoffical of course, that the location may be at Majestic Mountain Lodge again.

Picnic Time

After the catered barbecue rib dinner by The Pit, game championships were awarded. The games and awards are as follows:

THE GREAT OIL DEBATE BY ROB ENGLISH

Paraphrased by Bill Chace from The Antique Auto Musers News letter.

New oil formulas may be placing antique engines in jeopardy. To cut to the Chase (pun intended) flat tappet type engines are being affected in an unexpected way due to changes in oil composition. Manufacturers of gasoline engine oils are trying to fulfill the current modern automobile needs and at the same time assist the auto industries by meeting ever increasing fuel emission standards. All oils lubricate, true, however it's the additives in oils that really make the difference especially at speeds above idle.

The chemical Zinc Dialkyl Dithio Phosphate (ZDDP for short), an additive of concern in oils, has been reduced at the request of the auto manufacturers. It seems that ZDDP contributes to premature failure of newer engine system sensors and catalytic converters by loading them with zinc phosphates.

As a result two major changes were made to oil formulas in the 80's, both by lessening the amount of the ZDDP additive. The third change has just recently been made in an effort to eventually eliminate ZDDP altogether. ZDDP places an important zinc coating between the face of the tappet and the camshaft lobe. This zinc chemical absorbs the impact at the contact zone and keeps tappets and other sliding parts separated with a thin film layer thus reducing wear.

The American Petroleum Institute (API) oil formula that carries reduced ZDDP is API/SL and API/SM. This is acknowledged by oil companies as being manufactured for use in modern engines of non tappet type. However, for those who have flat tappets in their engines, such as my 52 Plymouth, and Model T and your Model A's, you should be purchasing oils which carry higher levels of ZDDP. These recommended brands are: Chevrons Delo, Mobil Delvac, and Shell Rotella T.

The other solution, says Rob English, is to switch to diesel engine oils, for now, realizing that emission standards are beginning to change for these engines too. These are: Castrol texion Extra 15-40, or any CI-4 Plus diesel oil. Be well advised and stay aware of oil formula changes.

The Automobile Engine Rebuilders Association (AERA) recently issued a tech bulletin on this very (Tappet) subject. Looking now at the 2007 increasing emission requirements for diesels, says the author, shows a strong potential for further reductions in ZDDP.

How do you know what type tappets you have? You can identify them by looking at a Motors manual cut away view or Integral parts breakdown list (IPB). Or ask a friend who knows.

In addition don't jump around with different oil brands. Find a brand and stick with it. Statistics show engines last longer if one brand is used. We don't know yet how synthetic oils respond but my guess is to watch out for the API SI and SM and avoid it.
